In Nablus in the West Bank, another Jewish settler shot and wounded nine Palestinians when he fired on stone throwers who pelted his car after Friday prayers, Arab and hospital sources said. Witnesses said the man was bleeding in the arm.

The incidents were the most serious since a communique issued on Wednesday by the underground leadership of a sixmonth Palesticiae uprising called for an escalation of attacks oo Israelis.

Violence

In Hehron, a flashpoiot of Arab-Israeli violence, settler Yona Haikin, 35, was returning from shopping wheo he was stabbed in the chest and back, Israel

Radio said. Haikin, who fired his pistol once and missed, chased his Palestinian attacker for more than 50 metres (yards) before trapping him at a roadblock and shooting him in the stomach. The Israeli was in serious but stable condition. The Palestinian's condition was oot Two Israeli paratroopers pres-sed their clubs against the faces of two Palestinians near the Amari refugee camp and one soldier shouted: "This is the last time we want to see you on the street."

"You are a dog," shouted the other soldier. "Say that all Arabs are stupid." The Palestinians, who were stopped while driving a relative to the hospital, did oot respond.

The incident today, witnessed by a reporter from the window of a nearby home in the camp, appeared to be part of a new Army effort to frighten potential troublemakers off the streets. Similar reports of Army scare tactics bave come from other West Bank cities.

The Army today released 89 Arah detainees and prisoners, agreeing to requests by prominent Palestinians. Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin, as he departed for a week-loog visit to the United States, said there would be more releases as long as the territories remain quiet. israel's major cities, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip all lost electrical power yesterday and a police spokesman said authorities were investigating whether power lines had been sabotaged.

Arafat willing to meet Americans

BELGRADE, June 24, (Reuter): Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said today he is willing to meet American officials to discuss ways of solving the Palestinian question, the Yugoslav oews agency Tanjug said.
The PLO chairman made the statement during an official visit to Yugoslavia, which supports the Palestinian cause.

Visit

Arafat "said he was ready to meet an official American representative and discuss the solution of the Palestinian questioo and the crisis in the Middle East," Tanjug reported. Arafat made the remark during a visit to Tanjug head office in reply to a question asking whether the PLO had sent an official document to the White House on PLO relations with Israel, Tanjug said. He was accompanied by one of his closest advisers, Bassam Abu Sharif, who recently wrote an article published io Loodon io the Middle East Mirror oo Israel and Middle East peace prosp-

The article apparently softened the PLO line against Israel, eodorsing United Nations resolutions that assert Israel's right to exist, and proclaiming we (the PLO) are ready for Its publication prompted the United States to question whether it was an authoritative PLO statement or only Bassam's personal views.

Asked if the article was an "autheotic PLO statement," Arafat was quoted by Tanjug as saying: "I will not tell this to you, but only to an American representative."

Amateur

"With the Israelis I can only talk at an ioternational conference. I am not an amateur in politics. I am president of the PLO,". Arafat added, as quoted by Tanjug. "Arafat today elearly confir-

Arafat also denied that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev had recently suggested that the PLO should recognise Israel, it added. "It was iocorrectly interpreted," Arafat said. The PLO leader recalled that

Drought bakes US prairie

JAMESTOWN, North Dakota, June 24, (AP): The drought baking the American prairie is ruining the hreeding grounds of waterfowl who come from as far away as Argentina.

North Dakota, cited by the Agriculture Department as suffering more from the searing heat than any other state, is at the heart of the prairie Pothole region, a 300,000-square-mile (775,000-square-kilometre) patch of glacial gouges that is a critical stop for migrating and nesting hirds.

The potholes trap precious fresh water that creates the food and shelter for birds trying to reproduce.

About 50 per cent of all ducks in North America come from the prairie potholes. Among the 119 ota are seagulls, pelicans, and even swallows from Bolivia and upland sandpipers that fly 6,000 miles (10,000 kms) from the Argentina Pampas to oest in the potholes. Barren

Palestinian homeland

VIENNA, June 24, (Agencies): Pope John Paul II today told Austria's Jewish leaders that Palestinians have a right to a homeland.

Meeting with the Jewish leaders on the second day of his Austrian trip, the Pootiff did oot respond to their call for the Vaticao to give full diplomatic recognition to the state of Israel.

John Paul flew hy helicopter to the town of Transdorf near the border with Hungary, where he celebrated an outdoor mass for an estimated 80.000 Roman Catholics, most of them from Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Dialogue

The Pope said The Holy See's Middle East policy must be seen in the context of its desire for constructive dialogue between Christians, Muslims and Jews.

The Pontiff called for "equal dignity for the Jewish people in the state of Israel and for the Palestinian people."... Before establishing ties with Israel, the Vatican wants a solntion to the Palestinian question and international status for Jerusalem as a city sacred to Christians, Muslims and Jews.

"The lewish people have a right to homeland, like every other nation, according to interoational law. The same, however, is true for the Palestinian people, of whom so many people are refugees without a homeland," the Pope said.

KUWAIT PRESS DIGEST

Call for return of Egypt to Arab League renewed

THE Kuwaiti daily Al Rai Al Aam yesterday renewed its coll for the return of Egypt to the Arob League and return of the seat of the league from Tunis to Caira.

Egypt's membership of the Arab League was frozen and diplomatic relations with her severed over its 1978 peace accord with Israel. But lost November all but four Arab states restored fies with Egypt after an extraordinary summit in the Jordanian capital. Algeria, Syrio, Libya and Lebanon are still at odds with Egypt

Writing editorially on the subject today, the newspaper said octivities of the Arab League and general secretorial were almost paralysed after Egypl was ousted and the activities transfered to Egypt was ond remains to be the centre of attention for Arab nationalism inclinations and the focus of all regional and internotional contacts on the intricate problems and cases of the region, the doily said.

Saying that only a handful of countries are apposed to the return of Egypt to the Arab ranks, the newspaper said the restoration of the place of Egypt among its Arab brethren is a natural development given the state of affairs of the Arab nation.

The contribution of Egypt to the Arab cause has continued even after the head offices of the Arab League were moved from Cairo to Tunis, Al Rai Al Aam said, adding Egypt deserves to take its place in the Arab nation.

Liberation of Mehran

ANOTHER Kuwaiti newspaper commented on the liberation of the Iranian city of Mehron by Mujahedeen-e-Khalq.

In a front page editorial, the daily Al Anbaa said that it was not difficult at all for Iraqi forces to cross the international border and liberate Mehran, but the wisdom of the Iraqi leadership preferred the honour of such operation to be creditted to the Iranian opposition party who have the greater right to liberate their own

The paper, however, noted that the "liberation" of Mehran besides its military achievements, indicated that the opposition forces against the current ironian regime have strengthened, and became impatient with continuation of the war.

"The victory in Mehron reflects the escalation of the opposition inside Iran." It went on.

Therefore, the paper noted that the Ironians ore trying to attribute the liberation to the Iraqi forces, though they rarely admit Iraq's

In conclusion Al-Anbag gathered that the countdown of the end at the Gulf war, and the fall of the Iranian regime have begun, and the end of both of them is very near whether by Iraql victories or by the Iranian opposition forces.

Speaking on the occasion, the chairman of the society Dr Abdullah Al Rushaid said primary health care is the backbooe of the health services" and described the primary health care physician, as a combatant, fighting in the first line of defence. He called for appreciating the role of these physicians.

Also speaking at the seminar. Dr Mohammed Matar said primary health care was the maio introductioo for any type of health service" and commented that this service was presently still below desired levels. He recommended huilding an atmosphere of confidence betweeo the patieots and the Commeonog oo the statistics available at the ministry, Dr Kamal Al Zeioati said the primary health care ceotres received 98 per cent of the patients. He poioted to the disparity in support provided to the hospitals and the care centres and said that giving hospitals added support constituted, a breach in health care.

He called for increasing moral and material support of health centres so as to improve their technical level. Towards attainiog a unified and integrated medical team, he recommended training courses for doctors working in these centres and enhanced co-ordination between centres and hospitals.

Eradicating Dr Mohammed Al Okaily from the Ministry of Public Health said that advanced countries including the World Health Organisation (WHO) were paying special attention to primary health care in view of its important role in realising the WHO's slogan "Health for Ali" by 2000 AD. He called for eradicating the differences between doctors at care centres and their colleagues io the hospitals.

The legal advisor at the Ministry of Puhlie Health Yahya Abdulfetouh, also speaking at the semioar, said doctors would be responsible to the Ministry of Public Health for any professional mistakes — other hreaches of professional cooduct would he investigated hy relevant authorities.

He commented that interrogation of doctors by the Ministry of Public Health was invalid as per constitutional rules.

Charter However, the ministry realising this oversight, had set up a new charter to deal with his issue. He clarified that a disciplinary board was recently formed and comprised the Ministry's Undersecretary; representatives from the legislation and legal opinioo department; representatives from the faculty of medicine; representatives from Kuwait institute for medical specialisations, and consultant doctors to be delegated by the respective court. The new system, he said, would provide legal guarantees for rights of the design of th rights of the doctors. He further disclosed that the doctors rights in some Arah and advanced countries were protected and defended by the Medical unions.

Thatcher's chance to grasp the leadership

By Peter Gregson

TORONTO, (Reuter): Ronald Reagan's curtain call on the world stage at the Toronto econoniic summit gives Margaret Thateher a chance to seize the spotlight as the West's leader in international affairs.

British officials scoff at suggestions that their prime minister, the longest-serving Western leader and most experienced of the Toronto summit participants, is keen to grasp the haton of leadership from

But the centre-stage roles Thatcher loves to play promote just the opposite impression at international gatherings such as this week's summit of major industrial democracies.

Consulting only a hrief list of topie headlines, Thatcher spoke 45 minutes longer than scheduled when she delivered the summit's opening address on Sunday afterooon.

Asked why she had gone on so long, a British official said sim-ply "When Thateher speaks, people tend to listen."

The Toronto summit was Reagan's last scheduled foreign trip as president.
The question of Thathcer's world role gathered momentum early this month when Reagan stopped in London on his way home from the Moscow summit.

Such talks riles Thatcher aides. They feel it demeans the special relationship Thatcher and Reagan have huilt up during the eight years they have headed conservative governments on opposite sides of the Atlantic. The November meeting will be their 21st during that time. "The reality is the president of the United States is always the leader of the Westero world," said a senior Thateher adviser. The leader of the second-ranked country is there to assist to the best in that role. But he added: "The fact that you've been there for a long time does help in that regard."

Thatcher was asked at a postsummit press conference if she saw herself now as carrying the mantle of summit leadership during the transition in the White House.

"I just see myself as carrying on believing the things which I have believed and trying to translate them into action," she replied, ducking the question.
"We as a team here will carry

Blockade and airlift

West Berlin marks 40th anniversary

By Martin Nesirky

WEST BERLIN, (Reuter): To keep the besieged city alive for 11 months, it needed 380 aircraft a day, 2.3 million tonnes of goods and population prepared to tighten its belt.

The statistics of the Berlin airlift, which started 40 years ago this week, are as impressive as the feat of the US and British pilots who flew repeated missions neross Soviet-occupied Germany from June 1948 to May

The motley collection of planes barely managed to discharge cargoes of food, coal and other items at West Berlin's airports before flying back to reload in the western zones of defeated

But in the air, they still found time to do "eandy drops", showering small treats from the planes down to grateful children scrambling over the rubble-filled bomh sites.

Seventy-eight Americans, Britons and Germans died in the huge operation to supply the Westero sectors of the former German capital after the Soviet Union cul all land links with the West, the final act in a long-simmering row over the future of what was left of the Nazi's Third

To Germans in the West, the Soviet blockade and the allied airlift have become symbols of a divided nation almost as much as the communist-built Berlin Wall that went up in 1961 to stem a westward flow of refugees.

The snag was that Berlin lies well inside what is now East Germany and was at that time the Soviet occupation zone.

To help supply the hungry people in their sectors, the allies had to transport many items hy train, road and canal.

The Western allies never secured a written undertaking from Moscow to guarantee access along these routes, nor for the three air corridors leading from Berlin to the West's zones.

This was to cost them dear. Relations between the Russians and the three allies were never smooth in Berlin, but by early 1948 matters began to Moscow reacted by severing ground links from west Berlin and halting supplies of food and coal from the Soviet sector.

The 57-year-old party chief's original goals in calling the con-ference — to overhaul the party apparatus and streamline the path to modern living - appear to have been scaled back.

Both Soviet and Western analysts have suggested this indicates the delegate selection procedures, which hy usual Soviet standards were surprisingly open, enabled Gorbachev's conservative opponents to ohtain enough seats to prevent implementation of radical Gorhachev nonetheless is expected to open the proceedings Tuesday in the Kremlin's glass and marble Palace of Congress with a call to limit the tenure of party officials and their authority over the conduct of government, the economy and their fellow members.

A stormy debate over alleged ballot-rigging that sent hundreds of demonstrators into the streets of Moscow and Leningrad to protest the delegate selection process offered a vivid illustration of the more open political atmosphere Gorbaehev has

But as the first party con-ference since 1941 drew near, communist officials sought to dampen expectations that the delegates representing the country's 19 million party members would do more than debate a list of recommendations or consider the personnel issues that could decide the fate of Gorbachev's reform programme.

Some observers said Gorbachev may have decided, after watching the fight over delegates, not to risk secret ballots on his key projects.

Thirty pages of theses put for-ward by the party's policy-mak-ing Central Committee as a platform for discussion at the conference bear the imprint of Gorhachev's own ideas. They hlame the late dictator Josef V. Stalin for stifling debate in the party, a "vicious practice" that contin-ued through the rule of President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The CPSU shall steer its political course via communists working in bodies of state authority in all spheres of society's life," the programme said. Vladimir Kluyev, party leader of the Lenin district of Moscow and a conference delegate, said the plan would leave day-to-day management to government officials and economic administrators.

The political and ideological work will remain, but we'll have more time, more effort, and the results will be better," he said.

However, the proposal raises the question whether the party can control strategic decisions if it gives up its authority to decide everyday matters.

Kluyev predicted to reporters that "no organizational questions will be considered at the conference" — meaning that Gorbachev won't attempt to cement his leadership position by making major personnel chan-ges, as Stalin did 47 years ago. Other party sources, however, speaking privately, said there may be some new appointments who have died or retired since their election at the last party congress in February 1986.

More than 60 Central Committee members elected at the last congress have died, retired or lost the jobs that traditionally had guaranteed them positions on the Central Committee.

Under the party rules that prevailed when Stalin presided over the 1941 conference, the party session could replace up to 20 per cent of the members of the Central Committee, which had been decimated by Stalin's purge of the party leadership. Party rules have become more vague since then, and only one paragraph in eight pages is devoted to the functions of a party conference. It says a conference can be called "to discuss urgent questions of party

Compared to the party con-gresses, which are held every five years to elect the Central Committee and set the party line on domestic and foreign policy for the coming five years, the vague rules apparently give the leadership latitude to present as much, or as little, as they see fit to the conference.

Report Although Gorbachey will make a report to the conference, little is known about who else will speak or how the meeting will be structured. Soviet press reports indicate the opening and closing sessions will be televised, and some official press reports of the speeches and actions of the conference are expected to be puhlished after the fact. But most of the proceedings probably will take place in secret.

When the conference was announced last June, it was

But some prominent Gorhachev supporters have been left off the delegate slate as local party officials rammed through their personal choices, and the party hierarchy had to scramble early this month to find spots for such well-known reformers as historian Yuri Afanasyev and filmmaker Elem Klimov. Other Gorbaehev supporters. including outspoken editor Vitaly Korotieh of the weekly magazine Ogonyok, found safe seats from their home districts far from Moscow after being denied slots from Moscow. Boris N. Yeltsin, the former Moscow party chief who was sacked after criticizing the slow pace of reform, was elected a delegate from Karelia, a far-northern region bordering Finland. Economist Nikolai Shmelev, a leading proponent of radical changes, and sociologist Tatyana Zaslavskaya, regarded as an influential Gorbachev adviser, failed to be seated.

News reports of ballot-rigging by mid-level party officials led to protests in Moscow and Leningrad hy unofficial political groups that have sprung up in the more tolerant atmosphere engendered by Gorhaehev's programme of "glasnost." or

Among those seeking the attention of the party conference to redress grievances are a group that wants to huild a memorial to Stalin's vietims and Crimean Tatars continuing their campaign for restoration of the homeland Stalin took from them to punish them for alleged collaboration with Nazi forces in World War II.

Otto Latsis, deputy editor of the Theoretical Journal Kommunist and a conference delegate, said he sensed "an expectation of an instant miracle at the conference. But he added, "I don't think that after three days of the conference we are going to be in quite another world. We'll have a better understanding of our progress on perestroika."

Bangkok holding parliamentary elections

Thailand tries again for coup-less democracy

By Clayton Jones

BANGKOK: If Thailand's July 24 parliamentary elections come off without Army interference, they will be the second such successful step toward a coup-less democracy in two years.

The Thai Army, which has ruled the country off and on ever since it reduced the role of the King to that of a constitutional monarch in 1932, has been uneasy about losing its economic and political dominance.

One of its own, former Gen. Prem Tinsulanonda, became prime minister in 1980, survived coups attempts in 1981 and 1985, and now is trying to shepherd the nation through a second electoral exercise.

Prem has slowly increased civilian control over the government. Last year, for instance, the parliament tried to probe a secret military fund, igniting an angry response from the armed forces.

Prem's astute balancing of fractious and often corrupt political parties has worked well up to now, helping Thailand achieve one of the highest economic growth rates in Asia.

Threat

But the threat of a parliamentary no-confidence vote against Prem in early May caused him to call for the new election. This sudden and unexpected move is a good example -- in three different ways — of Prem's political ability to stay on top: By holding another vote just two years after the 1986 election, he catches the political parties off guard. They have had little time to gather enough money for vote-huying — a traditional practice among many politicians. Voters may now more likely choose candidates by merit than hy money, helping to create a more mature democracy.

Prem heads off a potential challenge from Army commander and acting Supreme Commander Chaovalit Yongehaiyuth. General Chaovalit tried to retire prematurely this month, hut was refused by Prem, scuttling any possible plans by Chaovalit to be selected as the next civilian prime minister.

Chaovalit's next chance to become a civilian comes in Sep-tember, when he turns 55, the Army retirement age.

 By holding an election at this time, Prem has played into a Thai tendency to maintain the political status quo during important celebrations of Refugees are pawns in Afghan political game

By Paul Kreisberg

WASHINGTON: How many of the more than 7 million Afghan : refugees in Pakistan, Iran, and displaced within Afghanistan will return home? When will they go? How will they survive? Once home, will they once again attempt to flee the violence and should be humanitarian issues but have become deeply embedded in regional politics.

The Soviets have now started to pull out of Afghanistan. The mujahideen guerrillas, the Kahul government's armed forces, and numerous semi-autonomous local armed groups are about to start what could be a prolonged and bloody struggle for power. The mujahideen coalition strongly opposes any refugee return until the Soviet withdrawal is completed. They say it will be unsafe for civilians to go home until then; more likely, they fear that their own influence will decline once refugees start to return to their traditional village and district environments.

Mistake

Washington wants to help the refugees; yet it understandably resists letting too much United Nations aid go through the Kahul regime which could unduly enhance that government's political presuge, egitimacy and influence inside Afghanistan. The United States is also trying to persuade the Peshawar coalition (several of its leaders are unabashedly anti-Western and anti-American) not to obstruct the Geneva agreements on Soviet withdrawal and the safe return of refugees; yet the US wants to avoid tying itself irrevocably to

It would be a serious mistake for the US to recognize a muja-hedeen-organised regime in some newly evacuated Afghan border town in the near future; it should certainly not be done while UN mediator Diego Cordovez is trying to work out some has agreed he should try to do. Pakistan and congressional friends of the mujahideen are likely to argue the contrary. Most Afghan leaders, both in Kabul and in the resistance, seem to see the refugees primarly in political terms. They compete for the support of the refugees and view them as those they may be able to manipulate by controlling the flow and distribution of international aid. The Kahul regime, however, has now agreed to let aid flow directly to refugees from international agencies.

Dangerous

Refugee morale after eight years is said to be very low: Thousands of villages have been razed and elaborate irrigation works have gone to weed; millions of unexploded mines reportedly remain scattered around the countryside; health facilities and food reserves are virtually nil; and there is no prospect of planting crops that will grow before next spring.

Because the situation is dangerous it might be better if the refugees returned slowly. Ultimately the decisions must be left to the individuals involved. The US should make clear its firm opposition to any efforts at anyone to the refugees' return or to humanitarian efforts to supply food, clothing, bousing, and medicine on a non-discriminatory basis.

The UN co-ordinator of the humanitarian effort is Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan. Respected in both the Islamic world and the professional humanitarian community, he is a superh refugee problem since the end of World War II. UN estimates of costs of resettling and caring for the refugees range from $450 million to nearly $2 hillion, depending on whether one includes just food, medicine, and short-term housing or adds in reconstruction assistance. Money will probably not be the real problem in the short run. US refugee funds were slashed 9 percent this year and are likely to be reduced again next year. New 3 food assistance, however, could be made available and funds could be shifted, if Congress agreed, from previously unobligated hudget accounts, such as those allocated to huy arms for the mujahideen or cancelled military projects.

Moreover, Japan and the

Mexico's peasants prefer rain to any presidential candidate

SOLEDAD CAPUTITLA. Mexico, (UPI): The peasant leaned inward on the steep hillside to keep his balance as he placed the flat rock into the earth, part of a fragile hulwark to protect his nearly perpendicular coro field against crosion.

"Yes, we know all about the presidential elections," said Raul Montalvan, leaning against a shovel. "But what really concerns us is the lack of

"It's very late this year. Can any of those candidates bring on the rain for me?"

Mexico's 29 million registered voters have a chance to vote July 6 to choose the man who will govern the nation of 82 million for the next six years.

All observers agree that Carlos Salinas de Gortari, standard bearer for the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI, will defeat four other candidates. The PRI has governed modern Mexico since its inception in 1929, never losing a presidential or gubernatorial race.

Despite the practically foregone conclusion, the campaign has been more frentic than ever this year, reaching even to isolated hamlets like Soledad Caputitla, a community of about 200 people high in the mountains above the Oaxaca Plain, 190 miles (305 km) southeast of Mexico City. Opposition parties are trying to make inroads in the expected, PRI victory by stressing what they call its failure to solve the six-year economic crisis which has brought hardship to urban and rural areas alike.

Soledad Caputitla is a community of scattered farms, almost all without electricity or running water, which are centered around wooden or mud brick houses perched on the many bills surrounding the hamlet's single, unpaved street. Coffee is the main cash crop but farmers also plant coro, beans and other vegetables.

There are flat plots in tiny valleys, but most available land lies on sharply rising hillsides that must be protected constantly against rain and wind that blow away the top soil.

The wealtheir peasants also raise cattle, sheep or goats. Away from the main street, everyone travels by horse, mule or on foot. There are some irrigated fields using many brooks that fall from the surrounding mountains. On them, corn already juts 3 to 4 feet high. But most peasants depend on the six-month rainy season. So far this year the skies have been frugal, leaving the earth dry ASTHE late John Lennon once suggested, if rock 'n' roll was given another name — it might be called Chuck Berry.

Elvis Presley symbolised the music's look, Little Richard was its showman, but Chuck Berry was its pioneer guitarist and outstanding songwriter.

Today, at the age of 61 - 33 years after his dehut hit Mayhellene — Berry is still rockin'. More than that, he has just entered one of the busiest stages in his long career, in which has helped to change the face of popular music and influenced some of its most revered stars.

The recently released Hail! Hail! Rock 'n' Roll, a two-hour film featuring both concert and documentary footage of Berry, bears testimony to his impact. Keith Richards and Eric Clap-ton — two of rock's greatest guitarists --- appear in it playing Berry songs as a tribute to their Berry has also had his own story published — Chuck Berry: The Autohiography. Articulate and moving, it was penned by Berry without the assistance of a ghost writer.

Influence

Remarkable he may be, and songs like Johnny B. Goode, Roll Over Beethoven and Sweet Little Sixteen are classic and enduring reminders of his talents, but Berry is loathe to over-emphasise his feats.

Notoriously difficult to interview and extremely wary of strangers, Berry will. however, step out of his shell for long enough to refute the frequent suggestion that he is a genuine 'living legeod.'
"A living legend? I don't know about that," he shrugs. 'That doesn't enter into my performance to any effect. When I'm out there on stage.

for style and ideas'

I'm only interested in what's happening right now. I'm not a legend because I don't start anything. But I might have given it a big kind of shot in the Berry's fans are not so laid back in their appreciation of him. "So many people owe so much to him for style and ideas," explains ex-Beatle George Harrison. "He is really an all-time great as a rock and roll and rhythm and hlues innovator.

John Lennon was equally in awe of him. "Chuck Berry was one of my main influences when l was learning guitar," he admitted."Morethanthat, he's one of the great all-time poets.

"You can hear Berry in the Beatles, the Rolling Stones and io Boh Dylan. Dylan in his electric days was very Berrish. Chuck is one of the great, great

He also helped to put the famous swagger into Mick Jagger. "There were quite a few American rock singers who got me goiog when I was starting out," Jagger recalls. "But none had a greater influence than Chuck Berry.

'We'd really study what he was doing, really try and soak it all up. Maybe it made me imitative — hut at least I was trying to imitate someone really important."

Chuck was horn Charles Edward Berry in St Louis, Missouri, to Henry Berry, a carpenter, and his wife, Martha. Both memhers of the Antioch Baptist Church Choir in St Louis, Berry's pareots ensured that there was music and singing around the household from the of words in my vocahulary from listening to thelyrics of the songs that my mother would sing while doing housework," he says.

"Whatever the chore, she'd unfailingly tackle it while belting out hymn after hymn, Sometimes she would emphasise a passage in a song and the chaoge in her volume and expression would frighten me. It was as if she'd suddenly discovered Jesus standing in the house enjoying the song?"
Duck walk

Long before he ever picked up a guitar, one of Chuck's most identifiable stage trademarks was born in the family kitchen, not that he real-ised it himself until many years

Forever playing with his favourable rubber ball as a child, Berry would often lose it beneath the kitchen table, much to the annoyance of his mother when he came to retrieve it. He developed a method of getting it back which he hoped would go unnoticed. "Stooping with full-bended knees, hut with my back and head vertical, I could fit under the tabletop — while scooting forward and reaching for he ball."

He adds: "This squatting manner was then requested by members of the family many times thereafter for the entertainment of visitors. Soon, from their appreciation and encouragement, I looked forward to the ritual.

"An act was in the making. After it had been abandoned for years, I happened to remember the manoeuvre while performing in New York for the first time. Some journalists hranded it the 'duck walk.' "

Berry prefers not to linger on other aspects of his youth --such as the delinquency which led to the first of his three prison sentences. He spent three years, from 1941 to 1944, in the Intermediate Reformatory for Young Men following armed robberies which he and some friends carried out in Kansas City. "Our take was 32 dollars at a barber shop and 62 dollars at a bakery," he reveals.

Berry took up the guitar while he was at High School, buying himself an acoustic sixstring and hiring a tutor. Having worked in a car factory and trained as a hairdresser, he formed his first group - The Chuck Berry Combo - in 1952.

Shortly after he flew to Chicago for a holiday and met the man who was to set his career rolling, the famed blues guitarist Muddy Waters. Berry asked his advice about recording contracts, and Waters recommended he should visit the Cheese label.

Berry did and, in 1955, Maybellene was realised. It immediately became a nationwide hit in America, winning Billboard magazine's triple award as biggest selling R 'n' B record, the most played on R'n' B radio stations and on American juke boxes

The success turned him ioto the first hlack rock 'n' roll star and, as the hits continued, Berry was able to open the Chuck Berry Bandstand Club in St. Louis towards the end of

It was there that Berry had his second brush with the law. He hrought an Indian girl from Texas to work at the club, but at 14-year-old she was underage and Berry had apparently tran-sported her illegally across state lines. Under America's Mann Act, Berry had committed an offence. In 1962 he went to jail for two years.

Marriage

His third spell behind bars came in 1979 when he was given a three-month sentence for evading more than $100,000 in taxes, But Berry didn't waste his time in prison, and neither is he bitter to have been sent there in the first place.

He took courses in every-thing from accountiong to physiotherapy — and used his time to work on his antobiography. Begun in 1959, and restarted inside a cell eight years later. "I wrote it on yellow prison paper," he says. "Sheet after sheet — the government had plenty of it. But none of that business makes me angry because if the next door neighbour leaves his rake in the yard and I go over and stand on it. I'm just not looking where I'm leaping and I get hurt."

Having a criminal record oes not appear to be one of Berrys biggest regrets. He was more concerned about marrying his wife Themetta, whom he wed in his early 20s.

"I hate making mistakes that are entirely down to me," he explains. "I 've made two major ones. The first was leaving school early, and the second was marrying too late. I've been wed for 39 years to the most wonderful woman in the world

—I just wish it had been longer.

We have a wonderful marriage, we're as much in love now as when we first married." In the past, Berry has been financially stung but despite all his other troubles, he has emerged a wealthy man. He has invested wisely, can watch his money - and think back on a long list of priceles memories. He was once backed hy Bruce Springsteen, who pan-icked and struggled to find the right key. "It was the kind of night that I'll tell my grandkids about," Berry grins - and of ordering another guitarist off stage for playing too loud. He later found out it was Keith Richards appearing incognito.

Berry remains happy to play while there are still people to listen - but he has no desire to go down in history as the greatest rock 'n' roller ever.

"I don't want to be the king." he says. "Little Richard always said he was king and I said 'Don't tell me — show me,' King come and go. Me, I want to be known as the Prime Mini ster of rock...

Two views on the Afghan question

Helpless pawn in a century-old power game

By R. Cort Kirkwood

Afghanistan: The Great Game Revisited, edited by Rosanne Klass. New York: Freedom House, $19.95. The Fall of Afghanistan, An

Insider's Account, by Abdul Samad Ghans. London: Pergamon-Brassey's International Defense Publishers, $25. UNTIL 1979, the 'Afghan" probably brought to most people's minds thoughts about cuddly wool blankets or those stately, thin hounds that regular people can't afford. Then the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, and the dozing masses were rudely awakened to the fact that people known as Afghans were being massacred by the Red Army.

Eight years later, the Soviets have exiled more than 5 million

Afghans and killed 9 per cent of Afghanistan's population in a war marked by cruelty of Visigothic proportions: population hombing; the wholesale destruction of towns. agriculture, and livestock; the raping of women; and the truly evil, intentional maining of children with bombs disguised as toys. Even the United Nations is calling it genocide.
Two recently published books tell the whole bloody story.
"Afghanistan, the Great Game Revisited," a collection of scholarly articles, derives its name from Kipling's term for the struggle over Afghanistan between the British and czars that began in 1791. The British wanted Afghanistan as a huffer state to protect India, while the Russians were trying to gain access to the Indian Ocean, a policy continued by the Bolsheviks after they conquered Central Asia. The effort to keep the Russians and their Soviet successors out of Afghanistan was largely successful until the end of World War II, when the British Empire began to fold.

In "The Fall of Afghanistan, An Insider's Account," former Deputy Foreign Minister Abdul Ghaus paints a picture of Afghan leaders walking a thin line between the Soviets and British, trying to accommodate the Soviets in the hope they would be left alone. They American might with interest and were thrilled about the role hat this noncolonial, non-European power would inevitably be called upon to play in shaping the new post-war world." But the Afghans didn't expect the United States to turn a cold shoulder.

In "The Great Game," the late State Department official Leon Poullada details the failure of the United States to capitalise on Afghanistan's oftstated desire to begin a commercial and military relationship with the United States, leaving the country open to Soviet political, economic, and military pressure. From 1953 to 1979, the US repeatedly and shortsightedly rejected Afghan requests for economic and military aid, forcing the country to look north. The American national-security community simply didn't view Afghanistan as a strategic asset, an erroneous judgement in light of the Russians' his-torical quest toward the warm waters of the Indian Ocean.

American pobcymakers also thought "more active US involvement with Afghanistan would prove fatal for the latter. because Russia would feel threatened by a greater US role there." Ghans writes, In addi-tion, the US viewed aid to Afgbanistan as an action against its ally in Pakistan, rather than an opportunity to build an alliance between the after Christmas 1979.

"A careful study of history," Poullada writes, "reveals that the 1979 Soviet invasion, far from being a casual, random or. defensive move, was the culmination of a calculated process which . . . involved five stages": the establishment of a subversive infrastructure, the formation of a secret Communist Party, a Communist-backed coup in 1973 to destroy the monarchy and establish "behind-the-scenes" Soviet control, and two optional stages — the overthrow of who tonk care of the monarchy for the Soviets, and, when bis successor proved incapable of defeating a resistance, the invasion and "installation of totally controlled puppets and absorption of Afghanistan into the Soviet

A popular myth exploded by The Great Game" is that the Soviets are "bogged down" in their own "Vietnam." Nothing could be further from the truth. Despite Mikhail Gorbachev's metaphorical allusion to Afgh-anistan as a "bleeding wound," the "Soviet military appears to be delighted with its strategic and tactical gains resulting from the seizure" and "unconcerned about the costs." The Soviet-enlisted population is "very cohesive and stahle" and casualties are "well within the average of the Soviet armed forces," Yossef Bodansky writes. "The Soviet Union is presently winning in Afghanistan and is closer than eyer before to total victory."

'Illosion

According to a US-educated Afghan economist, M. Siddieq Noorzoy, an illusion that the war is too costly for the Soviets to continue is "part of the rationale for the frequent description" of "Afghanistan" as "Moscow's Vietnam." An examination of the economic data suggests that . . . under the rubric of international trade, the Afghans are being forced to pay for the invasion and occupation of their country." One way the Soviets reverse the charges is by purchasing Afghan crude oil for about $45 per barrel, and selling refined products back to the Afghans for more than $90. Finally, Ghaus points to the ultimate cause of the "downfall of the Republic": "Mohammad Daoud had seized power primarily with the help of Communist military officers. As part of the price for their help, be had to include them in the government apparatus. However, the number of leftists government and their sympathisers appointed to sensitive jobs . . . quickly reached alarming propor-

In 1975, trying to "resist the spread" of the "imported ideology" of communism, he greatly curtailed Communist influence" in his government and hegan moving on the Army. He also tried to open up relations with Iran and the Arah countries. Daoud told Ghaus, "You know the gamhle is lnst." The next year Daoud and his family were killed in the Soviet-backed coup.

Ghaus says Daoud was "tough and demanding...ex-tremely sceptical of the Afghan Communists . . . whose old-fashioned nationalism was in flagrant conflict with Communist internationalism. He could not bring himself to accept the hard-core Communists as patriotic Afghans." The question that looms at the end of Ghaus's book - the theme of which is the losing gamble Daoud took in trying to resist Soviet hegemony even as he invited Moscow to gradually take over the infrastructure of the country - is why, if he was so suspicious of communists, he trusted them in the first place. Why develop so close a relationship with the Soviets?

Both books question the wisdom of signing an agreement for Soviet withdrawal that allows communists a role in governing the country. Klass notes that the accord to which the US so hastily agreed in Geneva does not account for 4,000 KGB-trained secret police set up to control the country after the Soviets leave. Nor does it require the withdrawal of thousands of East-bloc and Soviet advisers running the country.

Ghaus observes that the Soviets "may withdraw their armed forces from that country, if an advantageous deal is offered to them in a superpower settlement or if the West, and especially Pakistan, recognises a pro-Moscow government in Kabul. ... In the eupboria of Soviet military withdrawal, the other components of the political solution would be conveniently forgotten, and the Soviets would continue to control Afghanistan through a pro-Moscow government.

Cricket from a vantage viewpoint

By Robin Marlar

ON balance cricket must be thankful to bave attracted so many devotees in high places. Kicked out of 17th-century Whitehall by Oliver Cromwell, Stuart courtiers spread the game all over England. Governors and their entourages then disseminated it wherever English was spoken.

For much of this century Robert Menzies, long-time prime minister of Australia, found Lord's "an island of tranquillity in a sea of trou-

President Zia was keen erough to rsuade tmran Khan to forsake retirement and lead Pakistan in what became a memorable recent tour of the West Indies. From 1972 to 1980, Michael Manley was prime minister of Jamaica and, if political poli-sters are to be believed, he will shortly be re-elected.

He has long been known by cricketers as a charming companion and well-informed student of the game. He was first introduced to it hy Allan Rae, then a fine Test batsman and now the president of the West Indian board of control, with whom he shared a flat in his salad days in London.

From that vantage point Manley watched the historic tour of 1950, when Ramadhin and Valentine, "those two little pals of mine" immortalised in calypso, earned the West Indies their first victory in England. When Manley left office his lovely island was in economic shambles, a country on the edge of chaos where Test matches could not be finished with certainty, especially if the West Indies was likely to lose.

His attempt to implement his view of the world, Marxist-tinged, failed. When the author of books entitled The Politics of Change, A Voice At The Workplace and Up The Down Escalator turns his attention to history of West Indies cricket, t is important to establish bence he comes

That said, Manley now reveals himself as a rattling good cricket writer. The story is of hardship, romance and suc-hensive, distinguished and elegant. The form is unusual. Each chapter begins with thoughts from President Rae's box during the Test at Kingston in February 1986, when England was revealed as a selling plater while the West Indian Derby-winner galloped home.

Politicians, more than any of us, have to be winners. To be defeated is to be outside, in darkness. Unless they have matured in fully-rounded statesmanship as opposed to remaining merely power-hungry, they can exert a distorting influence on spot, especially cricket, an activity in which both winners and losers should be cherished. Sport is about taking part, as well as about Writing in the tradition established by C.L.R. James, Manley exhibits the chips on the shoulder that some of us have had to come to terms with in the post-colonial West Indies, at once aggressive, demanding recognition, selfrighteous, anti-white. It is not surprising. A universally balanced view of the multi-racial world remains in the deep

Where I take particular issue with Manley is over bis uncritical defence of the era of Clive Lloyd, who has written the introduction to this book During it, the beautiful game was brutalised by the aggressive fast bowlers. However graceful these may look in full flow, whether English, Australian or West Indian, when they direct non-stop assault on the hody rather than the stumps, fast bowlers threaten the very existence of batsman-ship.

It is ironic that the great players to whom Manley dedicated his book, Constantine, Headley, Worrell, Lloyd and Sobers, all gave generously to the art of batting. Where are their successors, the followers of Biokeada and their successors. of Richards, now that a com-hination of head-high bowling and poor pitches has killed off the exuberance which Manley rightly extols as the great West Indian contribution to cricket, and replaced it with nervous self-defence?

Indeed, with the number of street games falling in Kingston and Bridgestown, cricket itself is threatened in the Caribbean because it has been made so physical. And yet apart from language, and an under-funded university, there is no other link than cricket between the islands of the English-speaking Caribbean.

Analysing the Hitler myth

By Gail Russell

The Hitler Myth: Image and Reality in the Third Reich, by Ian Kershaw. Oxford, England: Clarendon Press/Oxford University Press. 297 pp.$49.95.

THIS book takes on a classic political problem: the emperor with no clothes. And, like the child's parable, it focuses attention not on the emperor, but on the audience. Hitler projected an image of himself as sacred hero, omnipotent warrior, the embodiment of national unity and purpose. Nazi propagan-danists drew nn new technologies to dress the image: film, phonograph records, radio, the aeroplane. After all, Hitler was the first to take political campaigns to the air, literally descending from the heavens with a message of hope (and hate) for lnng waiting audiences on the ground. lan Kershaw is not the first to note that Hitler made exaggerated claims for himself. The strength of Kershaw's study is that he moves beyond a description of the construction of the "Hitler myth" to analysis of its strength and resiliency. He is interested in how Germans responded to this image, in different social and economic classes, different regions, over time. The picture that emerges of the audience is far more differentiated than that image of fawning masses hawked in Nazi propaganda films.

The sources of Hitler's immense popularity. Kershaw argues, have to be sought in those who adored him. rather than in the leader himself: their readiness to trust political "salvation" to a "strong man," their failure to develop (or willingness to suspend) "educated cynicism and critical awareness," their "retreat into the private sphere" in the face of mounting evidence of Nazi horrors. The research for genuine public response to the Hitler myth takes Kershaw into vast quantities of data. His material comes from two sources: "morale" and "situation" reports from official state and party agencies, and reports on shifts in public opinion documented hy the socialist oppositions. Both sources have built-in bases, but in opposite directions. Kershaw also draws heavily on content analysis of sources as various as Hitler's public speeches, newspaper reports, letters from the front, and death announcements of the period. (The latter often contained expressions of gratitude to the Fuhrer). He makes available to an English-speaking audience much recent German scholarship on the Nazi period. Perhaps the achievement of Kershaw's book is that he doesn't get lost in his data. He frames analysis around key periods and raises questions worth answering. In the process, he challenges popular views of German fascism, contending that: Most Germans did nnt warm to the notion of a new sun." They were concerned with getting out of a world depression and were "over-whelmingly frightened by the prospects of another war. - Most Germans were not confirmed anti-Semites, and the drawing power of Hitler's vision of racial "purity" as the determining element in winning support for the Nazi Party war, even to find a "place in the has been exaggerated. -- Support for the leader did not come in one great wave. A close reading of weekly intelligence reports suggests very unstable public moods, even (and especially) during what has been termed Hitler's "springtime."

Kershaw's most consistent finding is that the public admired Hitler far more than it supported his policies or his party. Kershaw sees this acceptance of "the Hitter myth" as performing an "integrating function" for the Nazi leadership: diffusing discontent and consolidating support for the regime.

Germans, he argues, passed off the most monstrous Nazi violations in the belief that the abuses were the fault of wicked suhordinates: The Fuhrer didn't know, and once he did, the abuses would be corrected. Thus the mass murder of the leadership of the Nazi storm troopers, which took place on the "Night of the Long Knives," came to be understood (in what Kershaw describes as a total inversion of reality) as overcoming corruptinn within the party and "paving the way for a moral renewal." The assault on the churches, early military reverses, and even the Holocaust (to the extent it was known) were by slight-of-myth disassociated from the Fuhrer and therefore from his regime. Early economic and foreign policy victories. Kersbaw argues, reinforced the image of Hitler as statesman and man of peace, able to achieve German foreign policy objectives with-out loss of life. This image, along with the formidable apparatus of repression and terror Hitler built up about him at the same time, allowed him to retain power even though most Germans disagreed with the specific ideas and policies be

To support this understanding of German politics, Kershaw needs to convince readers that the responses he is measuring are genuine. A tall order, and one hementions frequently hut rarely takes on sys-tematically in his analysis.

The challenge is to balance the claims of myth and terror in explaining Hitler's hold on power, for while Hitler's propaganda mechanism was manufacturing myth, a parallel coercive mechanism was manufacturing fear. The positive responses to Hitler that Kershaw finds in his data may be genine expressions of attachment to the leader as "symbol of national revival." They may also represent fear of storm troopers or the Gestapo. If the latter, then Kershaw's claim that the Hitler myth "unquestionably" functioned as "compensatory mechanism" and sustained the regime needs to be scaled down, perhaps considerably. There is, nonetheless, much to be learned from a book that grapples with the Nazi period in terms of weeks and months. instead of fitting an explanation to "rise and fall." book illuminates the character of political choice: the choice of leaders to build politics around images, subsequently falling victim to their own myths; the choice of citizens to substitute judgements. It hints at "paths not taken," fragile moments hefore the Nazi terror apparatus was firmly in place, when other political outcomes may have been possible, when a word fitly spoken might bave made a difference. 1988, The Christian Science Monitor

LOIRE VALLEY, France: Thanks to the French fondness for vistas, you approach the chateau of Cheoonceau through a great double row of mottled, arching trees, up a long, sandy road that a cavalcade could ride up, six abreast. It seems totally of the land with its sturdy, cream-coloured walls, amusing conical turrets, and dignified slate-blue roof all flanked by flat, symmetrical gardens. There is no Gothic yearning bere; everything is expressive of excellent taste, solid comfort, and money in the hank.

But come closer and you find ont that this absured and enchanting palace is huilt completely oo piles set into the classy water of the Cher River. It's actually a narrow hridge that has a chateau sitting neatly oo top of it.

Ferninine

Chateaux are often barnlike, but here you can move right in. People usually describe this one as feminine — perhaps because of its having been designed hy a successioo of women, but also because it's small and livable. The estate is best viewed between pink rose trees severely trimmed into balls, connected hy hrave rows of matching flame-pink petunias.

Early autumn is the time to come. Io the 16th and 17th centuries, the chateaux of the Loire were chic places for the king and anybody else who could afford it to go for the fall bunting season. The roses are still in hloom, and everything here gleams io fine arm powdery ght, like a photo takeo hrough a golden filter.

Of course, Chenonceau is lovely inside; all of the tiny panoed windows look out over the river, and there are large, heautifully proportioned rooms full of oohle textures: embroidered bed hangings, tapestries of men in lovelocks and knickers, woodeo shut-tered window, walls of silk, walls of handpainted canvas pretending to be leather, and

There are parquet floors, stooe

But the people who lived here are the lure of the place. Chenonceau has an uotouched, fairy-tale quality. Yet, a soap opera has been played out within these serene walls that would make TV's "Dallas" pale in comparisoo.

The original section was huilt oo the rums of an old mill for Thomas Bohier, finance mini-ster to Francois I, Francois took a fancy to the place, and after Bohier's death it was suddenly discovered that the former minister owed large debts to the crown - debts that could be satisfied either by total bankruptcy for the heir, or by turning over Chenooceau. So Francois' heir, Henri II, gave Chenonceau to his chunky blonde girlfriend, Diane de Poitiers, who had a hridge built to the other side so she could ride over there. She fancied herself as Diana, goddess of the hunt. Inside the chateau, you can see a painting of her, look-ing self-satisfied, in an abhreviated tunic-like hunting costume, with her signature loog, stout legs well revealed, aod something of a George Washington look ahout the expression. After Heori died. mean Queeo Catherine de Medicis kicked Diane out and had a two-storey gallery added to the hridge so that Chenonceau completely spanned the Cher.

Later, this gallery was completely bung with hlack and painted io feathers and tears by order of Queen Louise. The gallery ceiling still has ber design — it's unattractive, but historical.

Furniture

One of the most uousual aspects of Chenonceau is that it has its original furniture, tapestries, and paiotiogs, though some pieces have been removed to permit hordes of tourists to tramp through Maoy pre-revolutiooary chateaux were cleaned out during "the Terror" of the French Revolution, with most of the cootents destroyed or snapped up by English buyers. its furniture is due to the cleverness and charm of Mme. Dupin, the chatelaine of chenonceau during the revolution. She was remarkable. There is portrait of her by Jean-Marc Nattier in the red-patterned satin drawing room, and we can see that she was a beauty: large, dreamy eyes, a mild and elegant 18th-century face, and pow-dered gray hair that somehow doesn't look ridiculous.

She was a wealthy bourgeoise lady who knew all the dazzling people of her era and was often described as "tres gentille" (very nice). This latter quality, combined with her quick wit, made the villagers reluctant to damage her bome. She also had urged the local revolutionary committee to spare Chenonceau, since it was an important bridge.

Thus, all fleurs-de-lis and royal references were tactfully removed and Mme. Dupin lived peacefully at Chenonceau for many years.

That was not the only time that Chenonceau's odd status as a hridge came in handy. During World War II the mild little River Cher was the border between occupied and unoccupied France. The castle entrance was in the occupied zone, while the rear was in the free zone - very conveoient for people who wanted to slip across.

The curator insisted on The curator insisted on showing me the waxwork display in a side huilding; and he's right, it is nice. I saw Diane with her huntsman and her hridge in the background; Mme. Dupin conversing with Voltaire and Rousseau; and Catherine giving a fete for a happy-looking Mary Stuart.

Mary Stuart.
The curator also showed me a rare book: "Le portefeuille de Madame Dupin," ao ancient volume that smelled of old roses. When I read it, I felt as if a frieod was hailing me from across the ceoturies, Unfortuoately, it's out of print. So instead I must content myself with reading and re-reading Marguerite Yourcenar's beautiful essay oo Chenonceau, "Ah, moo beau chateau." If you go. there is a ooe day bus tour from Paris to the chateaux of the Loire that would ioclude Chenonceau, along with three or four other locations.

Walk along the lakefront promeoade of this steeply terraced, crescent-shaped city among stately palm trees. More than a dozen pieces of pleasing modern sculpture, topped by climbing childreo, dot the grassy park area. Surprisingly, here's also a Roman temple looking bit out of place on the promeoade, with a hust of "Giorgio" Washington inside. Italian

Italian it most certainly is, in laoguage, cuisioe, aod decidedly io temperament. Amazing how temperature and temperament are interrelated; Lugano, like Italy, is on the sunny, lee side of the Alps, where people and climate are both tourist-friendly.

Although Lugano appears laid back, especially at lunch-time and after work, when the whole town takes to sidewalkcafe sitting, it is actually a bustling cultural and financial centre. Lugano is Switzerland's third-largest banking centre; it's just that banks bere bave little wrought-iron halconies with pots of flowers on them. Art lovers will feel they've really found paradise when they visit the Villa Favorita, about 15 minutes by bus from downtown Lugano. This mag-nificent estate, owned by sleet tycoon Hans Thyssen-Bor-nemizsa, is said to contain the second most valuable private art collection in the world (after Queeo Elizabeth's). The baron's father built a museum on the grounds of his 1 /th-cell tury villa to bouse his premier works of Old Masters. The present baroo has expanded the collections to include modern painting, furniture, jewellery, and ceramics. Lugano, a Roman Catholic stronghold, has many magnificent churches (and a wooderful old synagogue, too). If you only see one, make it the Church of Santa Maria degli Angioli, with its remarkably preserved frescoes of Bernardino Luini, a pupil of Leonardo da Vinci. One of the most renowned frescoes in Europe is his vibrant "Crucifizion," covers an entire wall.

This church is just steps away from the promenade and at the edge of the pedestrian area of the "old town." A good thing oo cars are allowed in this charming oetwork of piazzas and arcades - it's meant for strolling and savouriog. Lugano's shopping area is full of dazzling iewellery stores, designer boutiques, and pastry and chocolate shops that defy you to walk on hy.

Lugano has to be experienced oo many levels, literally. There are two spectacular mountain peaks from which to view the city and its lovely lake. Ascend Mt San Salvatore by funicular to see the charming villages that dot the shores of Lake Lugano. You'll also get a glimpse of Lake Maggiore. At the other end of the crescent is Moote Bre, a favourite starting point for walks along mountain

One can also view Lugano from the water. Small rental boats are available, but ferries are a wonderful way to check in at many of the oot-to-be-missed sites along the water. Among them is Campione, a picturesque town belonging to Italy, but virtually surrounded by Switzerland. This paradoxical arrangement has to do with the fact that Campione has a full-fledged casino (gambling is very limited in Switzerland). We realised what a jet-set place we had found when we saw that

The fishing village of Gandria is truly à Gliffhanger, For-tunately, the lerry will take you there, because cars cannot navigate those tiny, vertical streets. Morcote is another for its arcades, under which the whole town seems to be selling the well-loved native pottery. Morcote is also famous for the

In the village of Melide, less than half an hour from Lugano hy hus or train, and just a hit longer hy ferry, you can stroll through all of Switzerland laid out in mioute detail at Swissminiatur, a wonderful amusement park. FAMILY DOCTOR By DR ALLAN BRUCKHEIM

QUESTION: I can remember that, in my younger days, many doctors would prescribe a purge to help cure many conditions that still have no cure today. Why doo't modern-day doctors learn from their forebears and help people by cleaning them

ANSWER: You are advocatiog some pretty stroog medicine that may have no beneficial effects for the sufferer. We have learned a great deal since those days when physicians, just like patients, believed that the inside of the "bowel" (meant to include the entire digestive system) was filled with dirty and poisonous material. Daily movements were required to keep the system "clean" and constipation was a serious situation. Castor oil and Epsom salts were administered in huge doses to ohtain the desired effects. The intestine was stimulated, causing forceful contractions to push out all of the contents, and frequently provoked more harm thao good. We now have a more restraioed view of bowel functions, and while daily regularity is a comforting thing, it is oo longer considered a must. It is far more important that our systems function in a oormal and timely way, rather than in the unnatural fashion provoked by excessive stimulants.

QUESTION: Some years ago 1 had an operation in my belly. Receotly I required another operation in about the same place. I thought I would have two scars after it was over, hut was pleased to fiod only one. Did my surgeon just open my previous scar to save me more disfigurement?

ANSWER: Probably not. A surgical incision is not like a zipper fastener. Once healed it cannot be reopened again, because the bealing process has reformed all the tissues, just as before, except for the scar. Your thoughtful surgeon planned his operation well, and in all likelihood, removed the old scar as part of your most recent surgery.

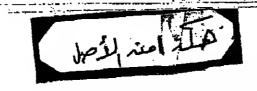

All surgeons are quite aware of the patient's concern about unnecessary, ugly surgical scars, particularly if they may be seen when wearing beach apparel. Of course, the needs of the operation come first, and there are times when it is necessary to create another opening in an abdomen, but apparently luck was with you and your ailment could be dealt with while the concern for a good cosmetic was equally addressed.

I THOUGHT YOU WOULD LIKE TO KNOW: To the more than 3 million Americans affected by the disease, it is certainly no joking matter. Psoriasis can range in severity from a cosmetic annoyance to a disabling disorder, and the exact cause still evades researchers. Psoriasis is a non-contagious, chronic skin disorder that is seen as scaly plaques on the skin, which lead to the rejection and denial that many sufferers experience as a regular event in their lives.

Kuwait to sell oil products to Sudan on easy terms

KUWAIT agreed on Thursday to sell Sudan 50,000 tonnes of petrol and other refined oil products a month on easy payment terms over the next four years, the Kuwait News Agency KUNA reported.

The agreement, signed by Sudanese Energy Minister Bakri Ahmed Adeel and Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Al Khalifa Al Sabah, is effective July 1.

"Kuwait appreciates the difficult circumstaoces which Sudan is passing through and bopes it will overcome its economic problems," KUNA quoted Adeel as saying.

Debt-ridden Sudan has commercial quantities of oil but bas been unable to exploit them because of rebel activity near the southern oilfields. It must oow use scarce bard currency to import oil products.

Pakistan likely to raise taxes and defence spending (Reuter): Pakistan's new budget, to be announced on Sunday, is likely to raise indirect taxes while hiking defence spending, Western diplomats said.

President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq will be careful not to raise direct taxes too sharply ahead of general elections he has promised to hold by Aug 26, the diplomats

Postponed -

The budget was to have been presented on June 8 but was postpooed after General Zia dismissed Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo and the national and Provincial assemblies on May 29, charging inefficiency and corruption.

The spendiog plans for the year beginning July 1 will be presected by Dr Mahbubul Haq, who was dismissed as planning minister io Junejo's administration before being reappointed as finance and planning minister on "The major problem will be to curb the growing budget deficit. which is worrying the government," a diplomat said.

The government had promised to cut the overall deficit, the difference between revenue and expenditure, to seven per cent of Gross Domestic Product from 8.9 per cent to

Deficit

But the diplomat said this year's deficit bad shot past estimates to between eight and nine per cent due to rising debt repayments and defence spending and the failure to raise tax revenue adequately.

The Pakistani economy registered moderate growth this fiscal year, but the government's budgetary deficit is worsening, forcing the government to borrow in the domestic market and abroad, said an annual economic survey made public yesterday.

The Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth figure of 5.8 per cent for fiscal 1988 is a shade better than 5.7 per cent in 1987, according to the supply.

Half of the growth is attributed to gains in agriculture and iodustry, while services provided three per cent and other economic activity like construction, electricity generation and oil and gas production, contributed the remaining 17 per

Attributed

Moinuddin Baqai, principal economic adviser to the govern-ment, told a news conference the economy would have done better but for Asia-wide drought which also hit Pakistan in 1987." Other factors adversely effecting the economy, he said, were the protectionist policy in Western natioos which discourage exports, worsening terms of trade for Pakistani products, and an increase in import prices of crude oil.

Ethnic violence in the southern city of Karachi, the country's biggest industrial centre, which disrupted the oormal economic life nationally in 1987 and 1988 was yet another cause for the restrained growth.

Largest Baqai said defence, with $2.63 billion in fiscal 1988, was the single largest item of expenditure. But its share in overall spending has come down from 40 to 35 per cent in the last five years.

Pakistan witnessed a seven per cent inflation in 1988, according to the survey. But iodependent ecocomists put it close to 17 per cent because the government's system of computing leaves out a large oumber of expensive items like urban bousing, medical care, and transportation.

Pakistao's current foreign debt is $12.44 billion, up from 12.02 billion in June 1987. The budgetary deficit which was 53.6 billion rupees in 1987 is expected to have riseo to 60 billion in 1988.

Pakistan receives financial aid from industrialised couotries. Its main exports are cotton, collon textiles and rice and main imports are oil and manufactured goods.

Diplomats said Zia's government would try to hroaden the tax base and improve the tax collection network, seeo by economists as ioeffective and prime to correction.

It could also try to standardise tax collection to prevent corrupt officials from taking a cut, the diplomats said.

"Sustained gradual effort towards a compreheosive reform nf the taxatino system would be necessary to bring down both the revenue deficit and the overall budgetary deficit," said the government's national economic survey released this week.

Saudi Arabia expected to launch second government bonds issue

BAHRAIN, June 24, (Reuter): Saudi Arabia is set to press ahead with a revolutionary borrowing scheme to fioance a growing budget deficit and is expected to launch a second issue of government boods tomorrow. Gulf-based bankers say Riyadh's budget placoers, spurred oo by a weak world oil market and prospects of sluggish iovestment income, may now be aiming to raise up to three billioo riyals ($800 million) a month from Saudi Arabia's banks.

Expect "We expect the next offering tomorrow," said one banker.
"We won't know until we see the telex, but it is very likely."

After five mooths of secrecy, Saudi Arabia launched a pioneering 1.5 billioo riyal ($400) millioo) issue of boods on June 11, its first major commercial borrowing for 25 years.
The Saudi Arabian Monetary.

Agency (SAMA), the de facto central bank, has given oo word of how often it will offer boods, but bankers say they believe the mathematics of Riyadh's widening budget deficit will dictate an issue every other week. The 1988 budget shortfall is officially forecast at 35.9 billion rivals ($9.6 billion).

Strong

But bankers said oil revenues appear to be running below a targeted 68.9 billioo riyals ($18.4 billioo) and the government is determined to limit straio on foreign reserves.

lo his budget address at the turn of the year, Saudi mooarch King Fahd set a 1988 borrowing ceiling of 30 hillion riyals ($8 hillioo) hut it is thought a slice of that will be raised by placing bonds privately with government agencies.

Some. bankers estimate

SAMA will try to raise a total of about 20 billioo riyals ($5.3 billion) through offerings to commercial banks this year, although it is far from clear if their appetite for the "development bonds" is that strong.

> Although Saudi banks are cash rich - a slack economy and a history of problem loans has kept new lending at low levels the first offering was almost certainly undersubscribed.

Bankers estimate 900 million to one billion riyals ($240 to 265 millioo) of the first bond offering was taken up and some expect a similar response to a second 1.5 billion rival issue.

The limited subscription was dictated less by the yield and more by banks' reluctance to tie themselves ioto a medium-term financial instrument with oo clear word on whether it can be ontraded in "secondary market" once bought.

US economy grows by 3.6 per cent

WASHINGTON, June 24, (AP): The US economy expanded at a robust 3.6 per cent pace in the first three months of this year, slightly less than previously thought, the government said yesterday. The expansioo was fuelled by an export-driven manufacturiog boom.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the broadest measure of the country's economic health, grew to a seasonally adjusted annual level of $3.915 trillion in the January-March period, a $34.6 billioo increase from three mon-

Prompted Strong first quarter growth has promoted President Reagan's administration to boost its 1988 projection for GNP growth to 3.5 per cent. At the start of the year, the administration had predicted the economy would grow 2.9 per cent in 1988, the same rate of growth as in 1986 and 1987.

At the time, many private economists were more pessionis-tic, but they have since scrambled to increase their predictions.

"Our rosy forecast wasn't rosy enough," said Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the presideoual Council of Economic Advisers. The ecocomy is doing better than even we expected."

Retreat

The latest first quarter oumbers were a modest downward revisioo of a previous estimate of GNP growth in the first quarter. A month ago, the government put GNP growth at 3.9 per cent. However, io April, the initial estimate was a much lower 2.3

Many analysts were expecting the slight retreat.

Yesterday's revisions show that noo-military spending by the federal government was $3.8 hillion less than previously thought. Most of that was accounted for by a dip in purchases of surplus farm commodities

Consumer spending, although up a moderately strong 3.8 per ceot, was weaker than the previously estimated 4.3 per cent growth. Much of that was due to somewhat less automobile buying than first thought.

Immediately after the October stock market crash, many ecooomists feared the shock to coosumer confidence would topple the country into a recessioo.

Coosumer spending did post a rare 2.5 per cent decline io the fourth quarter, but it has come back in the first three months of this year.

Spurred

The engioes driving the sixyear-old ecocomic expansion oow, even more than consumer spending, are rising export sales spurred by the cheaper dollar and the consequent surge in modernisatioo and expansioo spending by busioesses.

Exports of goods and services were up a strong 22.8 per ceot in the first quarter. Business investment in capital equipment sbot up 33.1 per cent, the fastest rise since the first year of the recovery from the 1981-82 recession.

Turkish firm wins building contracts in Soviet Union

MOSCOW, June 24, (Reuter): The Turkish firm Enka Construction luc has landed two multi-million dollar building contracts in Moscow, a Turkish embassy spokesman said today. Enka has signed contracts to build a 1,000-bed hotel and a shopping centre in Moscow with Soyuzmeshstroyimport, the Soviet organisation dealing with foreign construction deals, he said. The spokesman said he could not give the exact value of the two contracts, which other sources put at $110 million. But he added that they could help pay for Turkey's imports of Soviet natural gas. Turkey signed an economic agreement in 1985 to receive Soviet natural gas, undertaking to pay 70 per cent of the cost with services and export goods. The spokesman said work on the projects was expected to start within the next few months as the Russians wanted the work completed by 1990.

EEC finance ministers agree on capital liberalisation

LUXEMBOURG, June 24, (AP): Finance Ministers of the European Economic Community yesterday agreed to liberalise capital movement throughout the 12-nation trade bloc. The new legislation will have to be enforced by eight of the 12 member states by July 1, 1990. Spain and Ireland have been given until 1992 to implement the law. Greece and Portugal have not been set a specific time-frame. The agreement is a crucial step towards achieving a borderless internal market within the EEC by the end of 1992. The legislation will in particular allow citizens of one EEC nation to open a bank account in another EEC state. It will also increase competition among banks as it allows them to offer services throughout the Community. "It should make it possible for them (financial institutions) to catch up with Tokyo and New York," said Jacques Delors, president of the EEC's executive

London hotel prices rise at more than twice rate of inflation

LONDON, June 24, (UPI): Hotel prices in London have risen at more than twice the rate of inflation in the past year, a survey out yesterday said. Average rises were around 10 per cent, but a single room in a three-star botel at Heathrow went up by 12.52 per cent and a two-star twin in town by more than 15 per cent, said hotel booking agency Expotel. Some single rooms in London cost more than £200 million ($364) a night and the most expensive in the survey, the Hyatt Carlton Hotel, charges £216.50 ($394.03) for a single room with breakfast - an increase of 21.5 per cent over last year, it said. American tourists account for 30 per cent of total hotel business. Luxury hotels such as the Savoy had looked the most vulnerable to the strong pound as, surprisingly, American millionaires are more sensitive to exchange considerations than the US tourist, one broker said. "The main booking season is over, so a slight fall in sterling isn't going to result in thousands of Americans booking holidays to Europe," said Bruce Jones at the brokers of Kitcat and Aitken. "But it will mean that there will be fewer cancellations," he said. Colin Ellwood, chairman of the British Holiday and Home Parks Association said that hotels in Britain are just too pricely, "Hotels have priced themselves out of the British boliday market and created a boom in business for UK caravan parks," he said. "Six out of every 10 holiday bed-nights were now spent in a caravan of similar accommodation," he said.

In consultations with Washington, EEC will likely use today's accord to uoderscore that Europe is serious about curbing such subsidies after years of runaway spending that bas brought the community to near-bankruptcy.

The United States, long a critic of the community's farm subsidies, has suggested an end to all such price supports by the year 2000. Washington says such supports give west European farm exports an advantage over US products.

The EEC agrees that farm subsidies must be reduced to prevent the buildup of buge, unmarketable surplus stocks of food but bas rejected the proposal to do away

U.K. STOCKS EASIER, ROUNTREE TAKEOVER A FEATURE LONDON, JUNE 24, REUTER - EQUITIES STOOD LOWER IN LATE TRADING MIDWAY THROUGH THE TWO-WEEK ACCOUNT, DEALERS SAID. THE SLIGHTLY FIRMER OPENING ON WALL STEET HAD LITTLE IMPACT.

TODAY'S BIG CORPORATE STORY WAS NESTLE'S VICTORY IN THE BATTLE FOR CONFECTIONER ROUNTREE. SUCHARD WITH NEARLY 30 PCT OF ROMNTREE, SAID IT WILL SELL ITS HOLDING TO HESTLE, GIVING IT MORE THAN 50 PCT OF THE COMPANY.

ROWNTREE SHARES STOOD 12P LOWER AT 1,064, REFLECTING MILD DISAPPOINTMENT THAT SUCHARD ACCEPTED THE HESTLE 1,075P PER SHARE BID AND DID NOT FIGHT IT WITH A HIGHER OFFER.

AT 1430 GNT THE FTSE 100 SHARE INDEX STOOD 5.5 POINTS LOWER AT 1,873.4 AFTER A LOW OF 1,863.9 SOON AFTER THE OPENING. SHARES FELL EARLY IN THE DAY IN REACTION TO YESTERDAY'S SMALL FALL ON WALL STREET. VOLUME TODAY WAS A MODERATE 475 NLH SHARES AT 1400 GHT BUT THIS INCLUDED 142 NLH ROWNTREE SHARES, THE MAJORITY OF WHICH WAS THE SUCHARD STAKE SOLD TO NESTLE. MINON THAT THE ROUNTREE SITUATION IS OUT OF THE WAY, THE 200

MLH STG QUESTION IS WHAT IS SUCHARD GOING TO DO WITH THE PROFITS IT WAS MADE ON THE DEAL, " ONE TRADER COMMENTED. ANALYSTS THINK SUCHARD HAS MADE AROUND 200 MLN STG PROFIT BY SELLING ITS ROUNTREE STAKE TO NESTLE.

London Gold

LONDON, JUNE 24, REUTER - GOLD WAS FIXED AT A SEVEN WEEK LOW OF 443.25 DLRS THIS AFTERHOON, COMPARED WITH A MORHIHS FIX OF 447.00 DLRS AN OUNCE AND THURSDAY'S CLOSE OF 448.75/449.25. TRADERS SAIO THE MAIN INFLUENCE WAS A GEGLINE IN U.S. FUTURES, WHERE THE AUGUST POSITION DIPPED BELOW A SUPPORT LEVEL AROUND 450 OLRS. IF THIS IS MAINTAINED BY THE CLOSE, IT WOULD SIGNAL FURTHER LOSSES.

FIRMNESS OF THE DOLLAR ALSO REMAINED A FACTOR DEPRESSING THE PRECIOUS METALS COMPLEX AND PLATINUM'S AFTERNOON FIX WAS 3.75 DLRS BELOW THE MORNING'S LEVEL AT 555.50 OLRS. SILVER AT 1445 GMT WAS AT THE DAY'S LOW OF 684/686 CENTS AN OUNCE.

London Money Market

LONDON, JUNE 24, REUTER - MONEY MARKET I HEREST RATES SOARED THIS AFTERNOON, ENDING UP TO 3/8 POINT HIGHER, AS THE MARKET GREW INCREASINGLY NERVOUS AHEAD OF MONDAY'S BRITISH TRADE FIGURES FOR MAY.

OFALERS BELIEVE A HIGHER DEFICIT, WHICH MANY ARE ALREADY DISCOUNTING, COULD WEAKEH THE POUND AND USHER IN YET ANOTHER RISE IN BASE RATES. ONE SAID "THERE'S NO DOUBT ABOUT IT NOW. ANOTHER 1/2 PCT IS ALREADY WELL SIGNALLED IN THE MARKET." THE KEY THREE MONTH STERLING INTERBANK RATE, THE BEST GUICE TO MARKET THINKING ON BASE RATES, WAS 3/8 POINT UP AT 9-5/8 1/2.

Tokyo Stock Market Beport

TOKYO STOCKS CLOSE MIXED IN ACTIVE TRADE TOKYO, JUNE 24, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED MIXED IN ACTIVE TRADE AFTER LINITED BARGAIN-HUNTING, BUT A MOOD OF CAUTION ABOUT THE DOLLAR HUNG OVER THE MARKET, BROKERS SAID.

"IF THE YEM MEAKENS, THIS FANS FEARS OF INFLATION, AND IN TURN RISING INTEREST RATES, WHICH WORRIES INVESTORS MOST," SAIO BROKER YOZO ASAI OF YAMAICHI SECURITIES. "MEXT WEEK THERE

MAY BE MORE OF THE SAME TYPE OF MOVEMENT." THE NIKKEI INDEX GAINED 17.46 POINTS, OR 0.06 PCT, TO 27,750.39. IT LOST 127.85 POINTS ON THURSDAY. FALLS LED RISES 1.4 TO ONE IN TURNOVER OF 1.6 BILLION SHARES AGAINST ONE BILLION ON THURSDAY.

OIL, NON-LIFE INSURANCE, STEEL, CREDIT/LEASE, NOH-FERROUS METAL, MIHING, SHIPPING AND RUBBER ISSUES LED THE ADVANCE. COMMUNICATIONS, ELECTRICAL, PHARMACEUTICAL, SECURITIES HOUSE, BANK, WAREHOUSE, PRECISION INSTRUMENT, GAS, CONSTRUCTION, RETAIL AND SERVICE INDUSTRY SHARES DECLINED.

THE FOUR STRAIGHT LOSING SESSIONS BEFORE TODAY HAD DEPRESSED PRICES ENOUGH TO ORAW BUYING, WHICH PUSHED THE MIKKEI INDEX AS HIGH AS 27,878.90 IN EARLY TRADE. A STATIC DOLLAR MOST OF THE DAY ALSO HELPED TO SOOTHE INVESTORS WHO HAD BEEN RECENTLY UNNERVED THE DOLLAR'S RECENT

SHARP RISE, BROKERS SAIO. HOWEVER, AS THE DAY PROGRESSED IT BECAME APPARENT THAT INVESTORS WERE NOT CONVINCED ABOUT LONGER-TERM EXCHANGE RATE STABILITY. A CUMULATIVE 609,53-POINT DECLINE IN THE NIKKEI OVER THE FOUR DAYS WAS NOT ENOUGH TO SUSTAIN ACTIVE BUYING. "IT IS OIFFICULT TO PREDICT WHAT WILL HAPPEN NEXT WEEK," BROKER AT NOMURA SECURITIES SAID, "PEOPLE ARE KEEPING CLOSE

WATCH TO SEE WHAT THE DOLLAR WILL CO." A STRONGER DOLLAR COULD RESULT IN A RISE IN IMPORT PRICES AND IN TURN AN INCREASE IN WHOLESALE PRICEB, WHICH COULD SIGNAL INFLATION. OFFICIAL RISES IN INTEREST RATES AIMED AT DAMPENING INFLATION MOULD REDUCE THE ATTRACTION OF EQUITIES.

Hong Kong Market Report

HONG KONG, JUNE 24, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED SLIGHTLT LOWER AFTER A DAT DF ACTIVE TWO-WAY TRADING, BROKERS SAID. THE HANG SENG INDEX FELL 4.68 TD 2,707.56 WHILE THE . BROADER BASED HONG KONG INDEX FELL 3.63 TO 1,791.77.

TURNOVER REMAINED RELATIVELY HIGH AT 1.23 BILLION N.K. DLRS COMPARED WITH THURSDAY'S 1.59 BILLION. "CONFIDENCE HAS BEEN BOOSTED UP A BIT BY THE LATEST RISE

IN THE U.S. DOLLAR," A BROKER SAIO. "THE MARKET IS LIKELY TO PICK UP AFTER ABSORBING THE CURRENT ROLAND OF PROFIT-TAKING, " HE ADDED.

Abu Ghazaleh sees oil price rise region's economies makes such A PROMINENT Arab financial expert on Tuesday predicted a doubling of oil prices by the mid-1990s and a significant boom in Arab economies.

Talal Abu Ghazaleh also said thal Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Qatar, the UAE and Oman will experience a strong economic upturn in 1990.

Abu Ghazaleh, president of the London-based Arab Society Certified Accountants (ASCA), said his predictions were based on strategic studies conducted for a number of pan-Arab organisations by an accounting and consulting firm that he heads.

Among other signals, our studies of the cyclic nature of the recovery a definite pattern," Abu Ghazaleh said in an interview.

The studies, he said, indicated that "the markets have already bottomed off and business is picking up on a steady pace in various economic sectors."

An economic recession has hit the Gulf Arab states because of the slump in the world oil market since the early 1980s, magnified by the nearly 8-year-old war.

According to Abu Ghazaleh. all economic indicators were now "positive," and that included import figures, investment levels, profitability, inflation rates, employment ratios as well as

Jordan to hold talks with Iraq over debt payment crisis

AMMAN, June 24, (Reuter): A trade delegation from Jordan will go to Baghdad to discuss a $100-million payment crisis threatening exports to Iraq, an official source said.

"Our discussions in Iraq will focus on settling an excess of $100 million in letters of credit that were opened for Jordanian exporters to ship their goods to Iraq," Mohammad Al Saqqaf, Trade Ministry secretary-general, told Reuters.

Make sure "We will also make sure that such a problem is never repeated again," said Saggaf, who heads the delegation due to leave ton-

Under a protocol aimed at easing trade with eash-strapped Iraq, Jordan's Central Bank reimburses local exporters for goods shipped to Bughdad, which pays for them partly in crude oil. Officials said the system, started in 1983, hit a snag this year when letters of credit were opened to exporters for goods worth between $450 and 500 million in the first quarter, far above the current year's quota of $185 million. Theysaid that the flood of letters of eredit, drawn on Iraq's state-owned Rafidain Bank, began when Baghdad relaxed its controls on private sector imports in December last year. Saggaf said that his ministry, the Central Bank and the Chamber of Industry had sifted through the letters of credit and estimated the excess at around $100 million because many exporters did not meet official financing standards. He said the excess could be compensated by carrying forward a percentage of it to next year's protocol.

KD deposit rates firm

SHORT-DATED Kuwaiti dinar deposit rates firmed on Thursday as banks continued to buya surging dollar, dealers said.

The Central Bank adjusted its dinar exchange rate nearly a fullpoint softer to 0.27872.82 as the US currency gained in international markets on reports that the Toronio summit of leading industrial nations wanted a slightly stronger dollar. Dealers said Wednesday's KD100 million three-month Treasury bill had also tightened dinar liquidity.

Overnight funds dealt at 10 per cent from nine per cent on Wednesday and were quoted 11,9-1/2 per cent by early afternoon. Tomorrow-next was put at 10, eight per cent, about one point above Wednesday's range, while spot-next dealt at eight per cent. The fixed periods were quiet and virtually unchanged at 6-3/4, 1/2 percent for the one-month, 6-5/8, 3/8 per cent for the two through six-month and 6-3/4, 3/8 per cent for the nine and 12month maturities.

Commercial banks quoted spot rates of around 0.27875/82. Meanwhile, Bahrain. Saudi rival interbank deposits held steady in early trading on Thursday hut then displayed a softer tone as banks in Saudi Arabia put funds on offer. Dealers said husiness was generally slack, with many banks holding back ahead of the expected launch today of a second 1.5 billion riyal ($400 million) Saudi government bond offering designed to help finance an estimated 35.9 billion ($9.57 hillion) 1988 budget deficit. The Saudi Arabia Monetary Agency (SAMA) injected small amounts of funds into the market earlier in the week and the market was generally liquid, with spot-next easing during the morning to 7-3/4, 3/8 per cent from early quotes of 8-1/4, 7-3/4.

Banks expect SAMA to send an invitation telex for a second offering of government development bonds today, although no official confirmation has been forthcoming.

In the fixed periods, onemonth funds were indicated little changed against Wednesday at 7-7/8, 3/4 per cent, but three-months were a touch easier at eight, 7-13/16 after eight, 7-7/8 and six-months eased to eight, 7-7/8 from 8-1/16, 7-15/16. The spot riyal firmed to 3.7498/7502 to the dollar from 3.7509/12 on Wednesday.

A statement released by the Paris-based Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), said Kuwait offered 4.34 per cent of its gross national product to foreign economic aid in 1982, the highest in relation to GNP. At the same time, none of the developed countries in the world offered more than one per cent of their gross national product for foreign aid. Kuwait's aid as per cent of the GNP, however, fluctuated around 3.75 in the next three years, but then dropped to 2.91 in 1986 and was estimated at 1.30 in only $325 million last year. The Arab group of donor states, which is primarily composed of Saudi Arahia, Kuwait and the UAE, have brought sub-stantial economic aid to developing countries, the statement said. Last year's volume of aid by the Arab group, which hit $3.290 hillion, was for the first time in 15 years ahove aid extended hy the Comecon socialist bloc.

British media hostile against Kuwait: Al Rayes

THE Kuwaiti ambassador to London has accused British newspapers of campaigning against Kuwaiti investments in Britain. Ambassador Ghazi Al Rayes said that media hostility to Kuwaiti investments in Britain was a fahricated fuss. The London-based Kuwait Investment Office (KIO) has invested several hillion pounds in British firms, including a share of around 22 per cent in British Petroleum (BP). Some British papers and opposition politicians have said the BP shareholding, now under review by the State Monopolies and Mergers Commission, is against British interests. 'Some papers are trying to cloud the atmosphere between Arab countries and Britain with certain goals ... because these newspapers are paid or owned hy certain groups," Al Rayes said without elaborating.

Bundesbank intervenes to halt rally

Dollar rises sharply in Asian trading

LONDON, June 24, (Reuter): The dollar today held its sharp gains reached in Asian trading, but the West German central bank stepped into the market in an apparent attempt to cap its rise, dealers said.

Share prices were little changed. London's FTSE index of 100 hlue chip British sbares shed 15 points to an early low of 1,863.9 before steadying about 1,870.

In Tokyo, the world's biggest stock market, the 225-share Nikkei average rose 17.46 points to 27,750.39. Gold eased.

Steadied

The dollar rose sharply in Asia and steadied in European trading at just below 1.80 West German marks and 130 yen, as currency dealers said they believed central bankers were prepared to let its two-day rally continue. In Tokyo, Japanese Vice Finance Minister Akira Nishigaki said the dollar was climbing because the US trade deficit has been declining while inflation has been subdued "The fact that the summit nations reconfirmed their cooperation on currency stability should be taken as it is," he told a news conference. Dealers had speculated that the Group of Seven industrial nations — the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy, Britain and Canada might have agreed in their Toronto summit this week to let the dollar rise. The seven said only that they rate stability.

Dealers said the dollar's rally was slowed today when the West German Bundesbank sold small amounts of dollars as the US currency was trading at ahout 1.7965 marks.

Worried They said the West German authorities were worried that a weak mark, although a boon for exporters, could stoke inflation, a major Bundesbank preoccupation.

US Assistant Treasury
Secretary David Mulford said overnight be did not expect any excessive exchange rate fluctuation in the near future.

Some dealers interpreted this comment as a veiled warning to speculators that the dollar's recent surge from 1.7550 marks and 126.50 yen on Tuesday was overdone.

Many were inclined to beed this advice.

"There is strong resistance around 1.80 marks," said one currency dealer in Frankfurt. The dollar is likely to decline during the European afternoon as operators square positions before the weekend."

Many dealers still expect further central bank action to keep the dollar's rise from undermining bard-won progress in slash-ing the massive US trade deficit which has been straining the global economy-"I think 1.80 marks has got to be the psychological level at which they could come in," said a London currency dealer with a major US-based bank.

Gold, a key barometer of investors' inflation worries, was fixed in London today at $442.90, down $5 from Thursday afternoon. Inflation worried depressed shares in London. Dealers were expecting that Britain would report a large trade deficit on Monday, a key signal of inflationary pressure, raising the possibility that the Bank of England would raise interest rates for the fourth time this month. Meanwhile, in Frankfurt, shares fell back with the Boersen-Zeitung index down 1.19 points at 308.20. In Amsterdam, stocks opened mainly lower in lacklustre trading.

The Paris Stock Exchange hounced back strongly after three days of strikes by bourse employees this week which interrupted floor trading.

ebt relie African appeal for NAIROBI, Kenya, June 24, (AP): Africans have cautiously hailed the decision by the world's seven richest nations to ease their massive debt burden, hut they fear it will not resolve the economic woes that effectively impoverish some 500 million people.

"We have reservations about the blueprint on Africa's deht," the Times of Zambia said in a typical African editorial reaction to the summit in Toronto, Canada, that ended on Tuesday. "But there can be no doubt that it was the most significant in the series, particularly for Refrained The continent's leaders have pointedly refrained from commenting publicly about the 14th economic summit of Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan, the United States and West Germany, evidently wanting time to assess the implications of the final communique. In it, the industrialised powers pledged to do more to lift the crippling debt burdens of the poorest nations, particularly in Africa, but made no fresh initiative to help Latin American debtors. The leaders who gathered for three days in Toronto, backed a plan offering a variety of options that will benefit most sub-Saharan countries including slaping some loan repayments. But those measures fall far short of persistent African pleas to mainly-Western creditors to write off most of their $200 billion in debts, and reschedule others, at a time when servicing saps most of their export income.

Message French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy said the move by most of Africa's major lenders offered "a message of hope to the poorest countries.

Earlier, French President Francois Mitterrand appealed to summit leaders to follow his government's example of cancelling one-third of all debts owed by sub-Saharan nations.

On the eve of the Toronto talks, former Tanzanian President Julius Nyerére reflected most African leaders' repeated appeals when he told reporters in Rome: "In the global village it is not possible for a minority of northerners to control the wealth of the world and bope to live in peace. Sooner or later it (the debt crisis) is going to explode.

Bankrupted Nyerere, chairman of the South Commission set up in 1986 to promote economic co-opera-tion between Third World countries, urged the rich nations to defuse a "poverty bomh" by writing off all debts. that they have been virtually bankrupted by foreign-fixed low prices for their exports and high costs of imports, particularly oil. But they resist some calls to arbitrarily cancel the debts, fearing they will be denied future credits and trade.

Some Western economists cite also natural calamities like drought and famine and manmade tragedies such as civil war, rampant corruption and government mismanagement for Africa's economic ills.

But all agree that most of the continent's 550 million people suffer from lack of development and limited spending on scholing, bealth and bousing as a

The Toronto plan for the poor nations calls for creditor countries to reschedule official debts within a framework of comparability," according to the final communique.

Options But it did not bold the seven powers to any particular pledges, offering them instead options including reduced interest rates on short-term loans, extended repayment periods at higher interest rates, partial cancellation of loans or a combination of all those measures. "It marked the end of the disturning silence which those countries that Africa owes money had long maintained on the debt issue - arguably the single most crippling economie problem the continent has," the state-owned Times of Zamhia noted in its editorial. "What we don't like ... is the overture inherent in the remarks of the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Nigel Lawson, that the principle of full repayment of the deht is being slowly aban-

"It would be a sad mistake to create a situation where developing countries will borrow, use or waste the money and then wait for the loans to be written off or interest rates to be adjusted," the paper, which usually reflects President Kenneth Kaunda's thinking, added, "Philanthropy ... is not the solution."

Cautioned Ahmed Abdallah, executive director of the Washingtonbased International Monetary Fund, a major lender to Africa, cautioned before the summit that developing nations would continue to suffer from indebtedness, current account imbalances, protectionism and general financial anarchy unless they are represented at conferences where global economic policy is fashioned. "... the deht crisis is very alive and no end is yet in sight," he told bankers from 17 African states in Banjul, capital of the Gambia. "It seems that the debtors are now in a worse position than in 1982."

Zinc price hits a record high

LONDON, June 24, (Reuter): Zinc prices hit a record high in London on Thursday, spurred by car industry demand and orders from the Soviet Union. China and India, metal traders said. Zinc, a galvanising agent also used in die-casting and in making brass, is the world's fourth most widely consumed metal after steel, copper and aluminium. Prices for delivery of the metal in three months' time touched a record $1,385 a tonne in early business on the London Metal Exchange, hut slipped back hy $43 at the close of business.

Risen

LME prices have risen more than $500 a tonne since the start of the year and iraders see them going higher in coming weeks because of strong demand and low stocks. This situation has already caused some consumers to substitute zinc with other metals and plastics. Yesterday, Norway's Norzink A/S joined other major producers this week in announcing higher prices. It raised its price to the record high level of $1,350 a tonne from $1,200. The price of nickel, which has also risen to record highs on metal markets recently and like zinc is used in the steel industry, also looks set to forge ahead.

Supplies are likely to remain tight with demand booming and stocks 'down to the marrow', said Peter Salatbiel, vicepresident marketing for leading nickel producer Nico Ltd of Can-

Speaking at a nickel industry conference in London, Salathiel said: "The price of nickel will rise until it chokes off, or preferably defers, sufficient demand to bring requirements into line with the limited available supply.' The high prices seen for nickel this year result partly from an unexpected 15 per cent jump in stability of world oil markets.

1987, Salathiel said.

Strong demand and tight surpplies sent nickel for spot delivery on the London Metal Exchange to an all time record of around $10 a pound (0.45 kg) at the end of March.

Salathiel reminded the conference Inco lost $1 billion over the period 1981 to 1986 because of low nickel prices.

Agreed

Demand can shoot up unexpectedly while supply is inflexible in the sbort run and given these conditions the price of nickel will fluctuate, he said.

Higher commodity prices in general in recent months have raised concern about bigher inflation in the industrialised world in addition to stronger metal prices, grain and oilseed prices bave also surged on world markets over the past few weeks because of a drought in America's Midwest farm belt.

Meanwhile, in Geneva, forty countries agreed today to set up a joint consumer-producer copper forum which would conduct market studies but which would not try to bolster the market in the way many producers would like. The nations ended a two-week UN conference, called to try to fill what was seen as a gap in copper co-operation, without finishing all the negotiations on setting up such a group. They resolved, without setting a new date, to meet again for two weeks "in order to conclude negotiations on an autonomnus producer-consumer forum or group for copper. Such a forum will not buy and sell copper to influence its price.

commodity analysts said. Argued

Western consumers led by the United States steered the negotiations away from allowing it to undertake its own market promotion projects. US delegate Jon Rosenhaum argued that enough other copper organisations were already doing that, and the forum's main function should be to collect sunply and demand data.

World oil prices ease

LONDON, June 24, (Reuter): Crude oil prices slipped slightly on world spot markets yesterday hnt trade continued quiet with no clear price trend seen emerging

FATIGUE MAY DECIDE EUROPEAN CHAMPIONSHIP

outch and Soviets set to clash

24, (Reuter): Fatigue may decide the destination of the European Championship tomorrow when the Netherlands try to banish memoirs of their 1974 and 1978 World Cup final defeats by beating the Soviet Union.

Although both teams have played four demanding matches in the last 13 days, the Dutch have enjoyed an extra day's recovery since their semifinal triumph over West Germany on Tuesday. But it is the Soviet players who are likely to be the littest and strongest when it couots.

Unlike most of the Dutchmen, who bave slogged through a ioteroational level, the Russians, inaugural winners of the title in 1960, have been playing only since March when their new domestic season hegan. The previous campaign ended last November.

Furthermore, their analytical coach Valery Lobanovsky has programmed their preparations to ensure they reached peak hysical coodition for the emifinal and final. Their sheer overpowering of Italy 2-0 on Wednesday was no accident and will further strengtheo psychological advantage gaioed from their 1-0 preliminary group victory over the Dutch io Cologne on June 12.

Cardinals outlast Phillies

NEW YORK, June 24, (AP): Twenty years ago, Bob Gibson of the St Louis Cardinals set the modern National League era record of 1.12 for pitchers with more than 200 innings.

Will history repeat? John Tudor, a current Cardinal, has pitched 83 1-3 innings this season with an era of 1.08.

Tudor contained his sensational pitching last night with a Iwo-hitter — no walks, four strikeouts — as St Louis snapped a four-game losing streak hy defeating the Philadelphia Phillies 2-0. "I had good control tonight. I

TCCB calls for fines to combat slow

LONDON, June 24, (Reuter): English cricket officials want a system of fines at international level to avoid a repetition of the unreasonably late finish to Monday's play in the second Test between England and West Indies at 100 minutes after the scheduled close because of West Indies' slow over rate, prompting the Test and County Cricket Board (TCCB) to outline proposals to Cricket Conference at its annual

ICC meeting, but in the current England-West Indies series that figure is not being achieved within the scheduled hours or play because the touring team

TCCB chief executive Alan Smith said today: "Now we bave got 90 overs a day, the policy needs reinforcing. There were heavy fines (for slow over rates) introduced in last autumn's World Cup but they oever needed to be enforced, just to prove it can be done.

We are lucky in England because we have long evenings and play can go on, but what concerns us most is a situation in India, where ao hour after the scheduled close, it is pitch dark.

US America's Cup bolder Dennis Conner, 10th and fourth in yesterday's opening fleet races, finished third to show he will be a force to reckon with in winds stronger than the four knot breezes which prevailed in the first two races.

"We don't stand a chance here if the wind is too light," Conner

Conner's Nordstjernan, the former Kookaburra II renamed under a deal with a Swedish sponsor, was one minute 52 seconds behind Gilmour over the five-leg, 12-nautircal mile course

Conner, who regained the America's Cup from Australia by beating Kookaburra III off Fremantle last year, has not raced 12-metre yachts for a year due to his scheduled defence of the trophy in a catamaran against a New Zealand sloop.

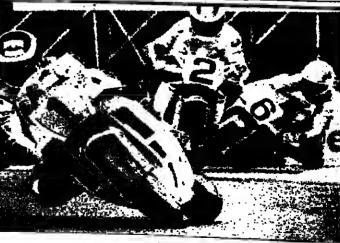

Our good start allowed us to sail our own race and pick all the good windshifts," said Gilmour. The 27-year-old Australian. starting helmsman in Kook-aburra III at Fremantle, is top overall after two wins and one second place. Home entrant New Sweden is the big surprise of the regatta. It has a new secret keel and veteran Pelle Petterson, helmsman when the yacht sailed as Entertainer 12 at last year's World Championsbip off Sardinia, has been replaced by 30-year-old Olle Johansson. Britain's Crusader '88, skip-pered by Eddie Warden-Owen, was fourth in the race ahead of Australia's Steak 'n' Kidney and Denmark's Holger Danske II. Australian-Japanese Bengal

III, winner of the regatta's first race and runner-up in last year's World Championship behind New Zealand, crossed the line seventh after a poor race.

ended up in third place, behind Didier de Radiques of Belgium. Lawson has looked invincible on occasions this season, and seems to be heading for his third world title as Gardner and his support team try to solve various mechanical problems.

The race could prove spectacular if Gardner decides to ride the risky race he did in Salzburg. when he and Lawson were involved in a fierce battle.

The Australian, who has been riding with three toes in plaster after a recent accident in testing. took big risks in the Austrian race with his hard-to-handle Honda.

The two men were locked to a duel at speeds of up to 300 kph for more than half the race before Gardner, who had drifted at high speed on to the grass verge several times, lost control of his bike and crashed. He was unburt-
